QUOTE OF THE WEEK

I demand perfection in what I do, and I practice very hard before I give a concert -- sometimes three to six hours a day.

-- Nina Simone

STILL ON STUDENT ACHIEVEMENTS

Justin H. Lagbo is a Third Year student from Virginia Beach, VA pursuing a B.A. in Cognitive Science and Psychology, with an emphasis in Cognitive Science. He plans to become a physician and specialize in endocrinology. His goal: to develop cures for various diseases and make a difference through research for people suffering from hormone-related ailments. He credits his mother, a medical practitioner, for inspiring him to achieve his long term dream, and to make a difference through medicine.

Justin is a very active OAAA Peer Advisor and is also a co-chair of the Pre-Health Committee. For the past two years, he has participated weekly in the Raising-the-Bar/GradSTAR Peer Tutoring Program. On Sunday nights, students can find him at the WEB Conference Center, where he supports classmates taking chemistry courses. He is always positive, encouraging, and willing to help others do well in their science-related courses. Thanks, Justin, for “lifting others as you climb.”

You can nominate an exceptional student (not yourself) to be featured in the Spotlight on Student Achievements, please send your nominations to Dean Patrice Grimes (pgrimes@virginia.edu) by Thursday by 12 noon for an upcoming OAAA edition.

Nina Simone (born Eunice Kathleen Waymon; February 21, 1933 – April 21, 2003) was an American singer, songwriter, pianist, arranger, and civil rights activist. She performed in a broad range of musical styles including classical, jazz, blues, folk, R&B, gospel, and pop. She was denied a scholarship to study at the prestigious Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, but achieved international acclaim for her powerful lyrics and vocals. With the blessing of her friend, playwright Lorraine Hansberry, she wrote the song, Young, Gifted and Black that was frequently performed by artists and at concerts during the Civil Rights era of the 1960s.

Maggie Lena Walker broke traditional legal, gender, and racial barriers to become the first woman to establish and become president of a bank in the United States. Originally named the St. Luke Penny Savings Bank in Richmond (VA), until 2010, it was known as Consolidated Bank and Trust Company. In her role as Grand Secretary of the Independent Order of Saint Luke, Walker organized a variety of enterprises. Although she faced discrimination, Walker fought for financial improvements for African-Americans. Parking is available for a fee at the Central Grounds Parking Garage.
Trailblazing athlete Althea Gibson became the first great African-American player in women’s tennis. Raised in New York City (Harlem), she won a string of American Tennis Association titles on the African-American circuit. After being allowed entry into the major tournaments, she became the first Black player to win Wimbledon, the French, and U.S. Open titles. Gibson turned professional in 1959, becoming the first African-American competitor on the women’s pro golf tour. In 1971, she was inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame. Later, she served as Commissioner of Athletics for the state of New Jersey. Following a stroke and heart problems, she died on September 28, 2003, of respiratory failure in East Orange, New Jersey. On September 29, 1954, Willie Mays, centerfielder for the New York Giants, makes an amazing over-the-shoulder catch of a fly ball, hit by Cleveland Indians first baseman Vic Wertz, to rob Wertz of extra bases in Game 1 of the World Series. The catch is recorded as one of the greatest in the history of baseball. Mays was named the National League MVP in 1954, and again in 1965. He played in a record 24 All-Star games, winning the All-Star MVP in 1963 and 1968. He was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1979. His base running, power, fielding, ability to hit for average and outstanding arm in the outfield made him the prototype “five-tool” player for whom baseball scouts search. OPPORTUNITIES WITH DEADLINES

Center for Undergraduate Excellence - Scholarship and Fellowships Series
Fall 2016
Mondays
4:00 pm – 5:00 pm
Rotunda Multipurpose Room (121)

There are scholarship and research wards for students at all stages (undergraduate, graduate, professional) – even alumni. It’s never too early to start learning about these opportunities!
In Oxford, Mississippi, James H. Meredith, an African-American, applied and was accepted to the University of Mississippi in 1962, but his admission was revoked when the registrar learned of his race. A federal court ordered “Ole Miss” to admit him, but when he tried to register on September 20, 1962, the entrance to the campus was blocked by U.S. Marshals. Turned back by violence, he returned the next day and began classes. Meredith, who was a transfer student from all-black Jackson State College, graduated with a degree in political science in 1963. Visit: http://www.history.com/this-day-in-history/riots-over-desegregation-of-ole-miss to learn more.

As chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) in the 1940s and '50s, Marshall was the architect and executor of the legal strategy that ended an era of legal racial segregation. Born in 1908, Marshall was rejected from the University of Maryland Law School because of race. Eventually, he was accepted at Howard University Law School in Washington, D.C. At Howard, he studied under the tutelage of civil liberties lawyer Charles H. Houston, and in 1933, graduated first in his class. In 1936, he joined the legal division of the NAACP, of which Houston was director, and two years later succeeded his mentor in the organization's top legal post.
